COURT OF APPEALS

Re: State v. Sery, Case No. 860333-CA
State's Letter Citing Supplemental Authority

Dear Mr. Shea:

Pursuant to Utah Rules of the Court of Appeals 24(j)(1987), Appellant Mark Joseph Sery wishes to respond to the State's Citation to United States v. Sokolow, 831 F.2d 1413 (9th Cir. 1987) in its letter dated December 21, 1987. In United States v. Sokolow, the Court held that a reasonable suspicion to stop the defendant did not exist. The Court stated:

We conclude that arriving on a connecting flight from a three-day trip to Miami with only carry-on luggage [ . . . ] are also the type of general characteristics shared by a large category of innocent travelers that cannot support a Terry stop absent particularized evidence of criminal activity.

The Sokolow Court looked at three additional factors and concluded that a reasonable suspicion to stop the defendant did not exist. The dictum quoted by the state was not one of the factors involved in that case. In addition, United States v. Sokolow involved a conditional plea of guilty whereby the right to apply was preserved (See Appellant's Reply Brief at 1-6).

Very truly yours,

Joan C. Watt
Appellate Attorney
